

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, and can't get feeling just right, begin drinking phosphated hot water. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your druggist or storekeeper a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish tinge which is not unpleasant. Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.—Adv.

HEAT FLASHES, DIZZY, NERVOUS

Mrs. Wynn Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her During Change of Life.

Richmond, Va.—"After taking seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I always had a headache during the change of life and was also troubled with other bad feelings common at that time—dizziness, nervous feelings and heat flashes. Now I am in better health than I ever was and recommend your remedies to all my friends."—Mrs. LENA WYNN, 2812 E. O Street, Richmond, Va.

While change of life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Such warning symptoms are a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness.

For these abnormal conditions do not fail to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A FATHER'S RIGHT

By HAROLD CARTER

(Copyright, 1915, by W. G. Chapman.)

The interview was naturally an embarrassing one, but Roger Lewis had never had a moment's doubt of the result. He was a young lawyer, with a good practice; his antecedents were irreproachable. And old Andrew Bannister was a gentleman.

Roger was therefore hardly able to believe his ears when old Andrew curtly refused his permission for the engagement.

"I've seen this coming for a long time, sir!" he thundered. "And I knew from the beginning that you had wormed your way into my house in order to steal my only child away from me."

"But, Mr. Bannister," protested Roger, "surely it is not stealing to fall in love with—"

"Bah! Don't talk of love to me!" interpolated the old gentleman bitterly. "You shall never marry my daughter, or I cast her adrift. Leave my door, and never darken it again!"

Certainly old Bannister had always been a little queer, but Roger could imagine no reason for this brutal selfishness. Amy listened to his account of the interview in amazement. She went direct to her father.

"What have you been saying to Roger?" she asked.

"Roger? You mean Lewis, that impudent jackanapes that dared to propose for your hand!"

"But, father, I love him. What have you against him?"

"I will not be bulldozed by you, Amy!" stormed the old man. "I will not permit you to think of the scoundrel. He makes love to you without asking my leave. He—"

"If he had gone to you first, father, I should have had nothing to do with him," said Amy firmly.

"You will have nothing more to do with him. You can choose between us. You can marry that young scoundrel, or you can remain at home, instead of bringing your father's gray hairs in sorrow to his grave."

Amy began to weep. She left the room and thought her problem out. And it seemed to her that her first duty was to her father. Roger and she were both young; she was an only child, and her father loved her in his way. He had had a hard life until late years. There had always been unfulfilled hopes which had tormented him. He had lived a narrow, straight-cut life. He had made bitter sacrifices to duty. In the end Amy wrote to Roger, telling him that their engagement must be postponed until she was able to bring her father to reason and discover where the trouble lay.

But she pined all that summer, and, once or twice, meeting Roger in the street, she was hardly able to resist his entreaties that she consent to an elopement. Her father, too, was growing stranger than ever.

At last Roger called at the house again. He went straight into Mr. Bannister's study. "I am going to marry your daughter, whether you like it or no," he said. "If you have anything against me, let's have it out now."

To his astonishment, he fancied that he saw a look of approval in the old man's eyes. But it passed instantly, and old Bannister raved and stormed at him. In the end he found himself outside, with nothing accomplished, and a deeper enmity between himself and his future father-in-law.

The next day a despairing little letter came from Amy.

"Roger, help me!" it began. "I am sending this by the cook, who brought me my dinner. Father has gone out of his mind. He induced me to enter the attic this morning, and then he turned the key on me. He has had bolts put on the door, and I am a prisoner here—and this is the twentieth century! Save me, and I will marry you at once!"

Roger read the letter in horror, and then he understood. Of course, the old man's mind had been slowly failing. He must be crazy. It would do no good to start habeas corpus proceedings. He must rescue the girl and take her away.

A reconnoitering visit that afternoon disclosed, first, an eager face and a fluttering handkerchief at a top window; next, old Bannister himself, armed with a gun, and pacing up and down the lawn.

Roger waited till dark before putting his plans into effect. His observations had disclosed to him a garden-aid door, left by chance in such a way that it reached up to the "maiden in the tower." Ascending that unobserved, he believed that he could stretch up his arms and pull Amy down to safety.

At dark he started out in his auto. The house was a little way outside the town limits. It was a lonely neighborhood, and this left him more freedom to deal tactfully with the situation. He left the auto at the back of old Bannister's little garage, and made his way toward the back of the house.

The ladder was still there. Unobserved, as he believed, Roger set foot upon the lowest rung, and soon he was tapping at the window pane above.

Amy opened the window with a little cry of joy. She was fully dressed, and carried a bag in her hand.

"I knew you would come, dearest," she whispered, and her arms clung to his neck. Very carefully he lifted her down to the top rung of the creaking, swaying ladder, and thence, rung by rung, down to the ground.

A moment later they were creeping through the darkness toward the hidden auto.

Now the girl was inside, and Roger was desperately cranking when a sudden shout rang out behind him. It was old Bannister, and he was rushing toward them. In his hand was the glint of a revolver.

Roger leaped into the auto and started away as the frenzied old man drew near. He sped down the road toward the boundary of the state, ten miles away, where a marriage could be performed without the formality of a license.

But he had hardly left the house behind him when old Bannister's auto was heard chugging along behind him. Now ensued a weird race through the shadows. Roger let her out to the limit. As he ran his mind revolved about a friend of his, a young minister, who would certainly perform the ceremony, even in his pajamas. But it was hard to throw the old man off the scent. The rattletrap behind never failed to indicate its presence in their neighborhood. Faintly the old man's cries came to their ears. But now the state line was crossed, and at length Roger, with Amy clinging to him in terror and joy, had thrown the pursuers off the track among the houses and winding streets of the suburban town.

Roger dashed toward his friend's house. He pulled up, left the auto at the doorpost, and hammered vigorously upon the door. It opened, and the Rev. Hugh Hughes—in his pajamas—stood confronting them, while in the distance a rattle, rattle indicated the approach of the enemy.

"How soon can you marry us?" demanded Roger.

"Instantly," said the Rev. Hugh Hughes. "Come in."

"And as the blows of Mr. Bannister's fists upon the door reverberated through the house, Amy was saying 'I will.'"

The Rev. Hugh Hughes opened the door. "You're too late," he said to Mr. Bannister.

The old man strode forward and surveyed the couple with an intensely self-satisfied smile.

"Bless you, then—bless you," he chuckled, gripping Roger by the hand. "It's hard to lose an only daughter, but, by heck, I've got what every father wants when he lets her go."

"What's that?" demanded Roger in amazement.

"Fatherly privileges—stern refusal—desperate elopement—forgiveness," answered Bannister in a breath.

Lo's Business System.

Old settlers will tell you that the Indians broke the first ground for wheat growing purposes in the spring of 1881. The Indians got their first ideas of settling on land and establishing permanent homes from association with the cowboys. Members of the tribe, including Pocahontas, Tom, China Eye and Big Lippled Pete, broke some ground and seeded a few acres of wheat.

When the wheat was harvested and "threshed" in primitive Indian fashion, the growers began to market the grain. The native wheat king would deliver wheat to American Falls, or elsewhere in the vicinity, for 50 cents a bushel. If the customer went to the grain the price was one dollar a bushel. When questioned as to the meaning of their singular business methods the Indians would invariably reply: "You come to my wickiup, you heap want 'um. Me come to your wickiup, maybe so you don't want 'um at all!"—Farthing Business.

Higher Home Efficiency.

A revolution is going on in the homes of America. It is being brought about by the study of such subjects as health, home nursing, child welfare, foods and food values, textiles and the making of clothing, the family budget, and household management. The outcome will be better health, and greater comfort and happiness for all at less expense. Because there is a demand for such instruction, and because the ends sought are so desirable, schools and colleges of agriculture all over the country are offering short sessions for the study of the subjects named.

Where She Drew the Line.

"I didn't object when the servant wanted the right to our piano once a week."

"No?"

"No, I was glad to do that because she was musically inclined. And I didn't mind lending her my hat and opera cape for special occasions."

"Indeed!"

"But when she decided that she and her sweetheart were also entitled to the use of our automobile one night a week I had to draw the line."—Detroit Free Press.

Getting the Child's Point of View.

One of the commonest reasons for our failure to get along with young children, and for our failure to get the most out of them, is our attempt to understand their actions in terms of our own mature motives and views. Or, rather, there is generally no attempt to understand at all, merely a measuring and criticizing on the assumption that their "reasons" for doing things are similar to our own.

NEWS and GOSSIP OF WASHINGTON

President's Attempt to Put World Into Two Camps

WASHINGTON.—When it came time for the president to arrange for the customary dinners to the diplomatic corps this winter, Mr. Wilson and his social, military and diplomatic assistants found themselves up against a hard proposition, due to the European war. From the first it was evident that two dinners must be given, and so the president undertook to divide the diplomatic world of Washington into two camps, each of which would be harmonious.

First, he put in camp No. 1 the entente powers, and in camp No. 2 the central powers. So far, so good. Then, closing his ears to the whisperings of those who professed to know the sentiment of the neutral countries, Mr. Wilson took the little blue-covered diplomatic book issued by the state department and placed in camp No. 1 the first neutral representative on the list. The next he put in the second camp, and alternating thus, he had the world divided into camps, with the United States standing between.

It was an ingenious though simple plan, and seemed to give assurance of peace at the festive board. But on second thought the chief executive gave it up and adopted another. The belligerent leaders of each camp were left as they were, but along with each of these groups the representatives of all the neutral countries were invited. So peace reigned anyhow, and the lucky neutrals had two dinners instead of one.
